Running for Your Life - Two Stories

Your success in life depends on your motive. There is an old fable about a dog that boasted of his ability as a runner. One day he chased a rabbit and failed to catch it. The other dogs ridiculed him on account of his previous boasting. His reply was, "You must remember that the rabbit was running for his life, while I was only running for my dinner." The incentive is all-important.

Boddy Dodd, Georgia Tech's athletic director, tells of the coach who, with his team leading 7 to 6 in the last minutes of play, carefully instructed his quarterback not to pass under any condition. But when the ball was carried within the opponent's ten-yard line, the quarterback was overcome by temptation. He passes and the ball was intercepted by the rival's fleetest back, who broke into an open field and raced toward pay dirt. He was speeding past midfield when suddenly, out of nowhere, the quarterback who had passed overtook him and brought him down.

After the game, the losing coach remarked to his barely victorious counterpart, "I'll never understand how your boy overtook my fastest back."

"Well, I'll tell you," came the reply. "Your back was running for a touchdown - my quarterback was running for his life."
