To Be Pretty Clean

As a father came home from work he saw his little daughter who had been playing in the mud.

He said to her, "My, you're pretty dirty."

In her childish way she replied, "Yes, I know Daddy, but I'm prettier clean."

A Thot for Parents

Studies of human infants and mothers show the importance on bonding. Apparently, just after birth, divinely-designed psychological and physiological factors in the newborn uniquely prepare him to become bonded with his parents. Certainly the excitement and adrenalin levels of both the child and his parents are at a peak. The senses of the infant are being stimulated by a multitude of new sensations. The birth is essentially an entrance into a new culture with new sights, new sounds, new smells, new positions, new environment and new ways of being held. Yet, at that particular time, he is equipped with an extraordinary ability to respond to these unusual circumstances.

Teacher Tips

What does "teaching" really do?

1. Teaching is informing!
2. Teaching is guiding!
3. Teaching is sharing!
4. Teaching is building!
5. Teaching is inspiring!

Gentlemen

by Dr. George Alquist, Jr

One never returns a business lunch or dinner invitation. A thank-you is sufficient.

A gentleman always returns borrowed items.
